3. Outlook

In the second quarter, the EMEA market showed a strong contraction, whereas demand in other geographies remained essentially in line with the same period of the previous year.

In addition to this, Europe witnessed a swift decline in the Group's main raw material, whose price decreased by nearly 30% since year-start. This decline led to a mismatch between the market prices and unit values of inventories stocked in 2022, with a temporary, yet significant impact on the Group's margins.

With regard to the second half of the year, Asia and the United States are expected to confirm an essentially stable market demand. The EMEA market remains extremely slow, particularly with regard to fibers for garments, with an expected recovery in terms of volumes sold of fibers for carpets and polymers. In the engineering plastics market, demand is recovering overall, which will allow the Group's new product line to reach the targets set by the end of the year.

Within this context, the Group continues its important debt cutting measures launched in 2022, in addition to actions aimed at reducing costs. It bears recalling that the level of debt and margins is constantly monitored so as to be able to adopt adequate measures, where necessary.
